About David V. Lott, Ph.D.

David V. Lott, Ph.D., is a biblical scholar, author, and Christian educator who has spent years exploring foundational questions of faith, identity, and purpose. His writing grows from a deep commitment to biblical exposition, historical context, and the practical realities of Christian living—rooted in the conviction that serious theology should be accessible to ordinary believers.

Drawing on his doctoral work at Liberty University and years of teaching and discipleship, Lott crafts books that bring the rigor of academic biblical study into the hands of everyday readers—without reducing the depth of the underlying theology. His goal is to help believers discover who they have become in Christ before asking what they should do for Christ.

Behind the Book

Why Did God Create Me? is Book 4 of the Truths That Set You Free series—a collection examining salvation, eternal security, spiritual identity, and the believer's life in Christ.

Interview Topics & Talking Points

Let's Talk About...

1

Identity Before Action

Why Christian purpose must begin with who the believer has become in Christ—not what they accomplish or achieve for God

2

The Butterfly Moment

How the irreversible transformation of a caterpillar into a butterfly illustrates the believer's permanent new identity in Christ—and why struggles don't undo it

3

Salvation, Justification & Eternal Security

Exploring the biblical doctrines that anchor Christian identity and free believers from the treadmill of earning God's acceptance

4

Building the Truths That Set You Free Series

The vision behind a six-book series examining foundational Christian doctrines for newer believers and longtime Christians alike

5

Purpose Beyond Performance

How the book challenges believers who evaluate their relationship with God primarily through successes, failures, or spiritual performance

6

Serious Theology for Everyday Readers

Lott's approach to bringing academic biblical scholarship into accessible language without making it shallow—and why that balance matters

Available for podcasts, radio, TV, print interviews, and event appearances. David is an insightful and engaging speaker who connects with audiences interested in biblical theology, Christian identity, and the practical foundations of purposeful living.

What Readers Are Saying

> "Lott takes one of the most profound questions a person can ask—Why did God create me?—and answers it with theological rigor and pastoral warmth. This is not a self-help book dressed in Christian language. It is a serious, grounded examination of identity, salvation, and purpose rooted in Scripture, written for anyone who has ever wondered whether their relationship with God depends on how well they perform."

For newer Christians seeking a biblical foundation, and longtime believers who may have spent years evaluating their walk with God through successes and failures, Why Did God Create Me? offers a liberating, Scripture-grounded answer to one of life's most enduring questions—that purpose begins not with what you do, but with who you are in Christ.
